Take heart he did think about you and worry about how you were doing getting along with your school all the things that go with a child growing up. No child is right all the time but that is growing up later you look back and know why when you have your own children. Share your good times with your children so they know their grandfather

It is a shame that you were not able to be around your father more and know the story there. So sad that you were not notified as you should have been. He would have wanted you there not to mourn but to remember good times.

It was terribly unfortunate that I couldn't be there, Dad, as no one bothered to tell me what happened until I found out through the Internet. You didn't always agree with the way I lived my life, but you will always be my father, and no one -- no matter how hard they try -- can take that away from me. You will be missed.
