She loved to travel across the country, embracing the diverse beauty of America. Whether watching sunsets, observing wildlife, or taking long walks in nature, Kyliegh found peace and inspiration in the world around her.

One of the things I appreciated about our friendship is we could go a long time without speaking, then pick up right where we left off. She was this way with all friends—genuine and caring. Kyleigh reached out to me this past year to reconnect, and I will always be thankful she did. We rarely went a day after without texting or calling, and although she'd praise me for strengthening her, she strengthened me. We would discuss life, every messy crevice of it, and she would tell me it would all be okay, and I'd feel assured that somehow it would be. And whenever I've been tempted to be bitter, angry at the world, I would speak with her or remember her words about me, who she believed I was and will be, her assurance of me as a loving, "Big Twin", and the anger would disperse, and I felt strengthened to be that kind, loving person she viewed me as... I will miss the scriptures we shared together, her jokes, openly discussing anything and everything, her energy... her. I will cherish our memories, even the faded 18 year old ones, and the ones of massaging her feet, brushing her hair, and holding her hand. There are not words to describe the honor it has been to be her friend, and I'm thankful we left nothing unsaid. She's worth grieving. See you on the Otherside, my twin. I love you, too.

There was a time, when I went to Indiana to visit Kyliegh for our 6-Month Anniversary. Kyliegh took me to her favorite park near Gas City, as we decided to have a picnic. We bought a party tray with Sandwiches and Crackers, and found a nice spot on the grass. It was a sunny day, and the air was crisp and cool with a good breeze. I remember laying next to her just enjoying the weather and talking, when suddenly a Blue Butterfly landed on her head. Kyleighs favorite color was blue, AND she felt like a princess, so she was extremely excited and rushed me to take a picture, which scared away the butterfly. But I ended up taking this right after anyways. Seeing her excitement is what truly allowed me to know what a good, pure heart she had. I will always love who she was, and miss her dearly. I hope that you have all of the blue butterflies landing on you in heaven, Kyliegh

Kyliegh was the best friend anyone could have and loved from the heart. It was an honor to have her in my life. I loved my friend. He went away from me. There's nothing more to say. The poem ends, Soft as it began,—I loved my friend.—

I did not want to leave your side. I'm glad others can be there

I missed you before you even left.

But you made me realize I can't be alone right now and that's okay.

Yes, you should have people around

I love you so much

I love you too

Iron sharpens iron. You keep me strong and on the path

I'll be available to text and call as much as you want

A little better today

Second line, Written by Henry Scott Holland (27 January 1847 – 17 March 1918) was Regius Professor of Divinity at the University of Oxford

Death is nothing at all. It does not count. I have only slipped away into the next room. Nothing has happened. Everything remains exactly as it was. I am I, and you are you, and the old life that we lived so fondly together is untouched, unchanged. Whatever we were to each other, that we are still. Call me by the old familiar name. Speak of me in the easy way which you always used. Put no difference into your tone. Wear no forced air of solemnity or sorrow. Laugh as we always laughed at the little jokes that we enjoyed together. Play, smile, think of me, pray for me. Let my name be ever the household word that it always was. Let it be spoken without an effort, without the ghost of a shadow upon it. Life means all that it ever meant. It is the same as it ever was. There is absolute and unbroken continuity. What is this death but a negligible accident? Why should I be out of mind because I am out of sight? I am but waiting for you, for an interval, somewhere very near, just round the corner. All is well.

34 I will bless the LORD "at all times; his praise shall continually be in my mouth.

2 My soul "makes its boast in the LORD; let the humble hear and "be glad.

3 Oh, "magnify the LORD with me, and let us exalt his name together!

4 I "sought the LORD, and he answered me and delivered me from all my fears.

5 Those who look to him are "radiant, and their faces shall never be ashamed.

6 "This poor man cried, and the LORD heard him and "saved him out of all his troubles.

7 "The angel of the LORD "encamps around those who fear him, and delivers them.
